

Contributors

1. José Flávio Sombra Saraiva is Professor of International Relations at the University of Brasília, Director-general of Brazilian Institute of International Relations (IBRI), Brazil, and coorganizer of this investigation's programme.
2. Andrew Hurrell is Professor at Nuffield College, Oxford University, United Kingdom.
3. Robert Frank is Professor of History of International Relations at the University of Paris 1, Director of the Pierre Renouvin's Institute, and General-Secretary at the Commission of International Relations, France.
4. Didier Musiedlak is Professor of History of International Relations at the University of Paris 10, France.
5. Vladimir Kulagin is Professor of International Relations at the University of Moscow, MGIMO, Russia.
6. Denis Rolland is Professor of History of International Relations at the University of Strasbourg (Robert Schuman), member of the University Institute of France and coorganizer of this investigation's programme.
7. Cristopher Coker is Professor of International Relations at the London School of Economics and Political Science, United Kingdom.
8. Mario Rapoport and Claudio Spiguel are Professor of Economics and History of International Relations at the University of Buenos Aires, Argentina.
9. Raúl Bernal Meza is Professor of International Relations at the National University of the Center and at the University of Buenos Aires, Argentina.
10. Wolfgang Döpcke is Professor of African History and History of International Relations at the University of Brasília, Brazil.
11. Thomas Skidmore is professor emeritus of History at the Watson Institute, Brown University, United States of America.
12. Amado Luiz Cervo is Professor of History of International Relations at the University of Brasília, Member of the Brazilian Diplomatic Academy (Rio Branco Institute), Brazil.